In the Sardinian dialect Bentu means wind. Wind is a constant presence on the island of Sardinia which is swept by eight different winds. The Bentu rug is a representation of the importance of the action of winds on wild landscapes allowing wild grasses and flowers to disperse their seeds and reproduce. It is also through the action of wind that wild meadow's greatest beauty is revealed. In fact, as the wind blows through a field, new layers of color tones, patterns and textures come to life inviting for contemplation. The Bentu rug is meticulously crafted employing several materials representing the diversity that can be found in nature. Handwoven with a blend of the finest Italian linen and alpaca wool imported from the Andes, this rug is a textile metaphor of the beauty of an open field, an invitation to discover the hidden and capture details. It's the ultimate expression of a woven landscape.
